California Human Development

California Human Development (CHD) is a nonprofit human services provider waging the War on Poverty across 31 northern California counties. Inspired to serve our state's migrant farmworkers in 1967, today CHD serves people of low-income from all walks of life — giving 25,000 people a year a hand up to the American Dream.

Anthony Soto Employment Training (ASET) Centers

Anthony Soto Employment Training (ASET) Center

The Anthony Soto Employment Training (ASET) Centers provide vocational training and education to those seeking to improve their livelihood through new career pathways.

Our training approach is a combination of virtual, hybrid learning, and hands-on job training in an industrial setting. The training is appropriate to the skill being taught, and under conditions found in the industry. Items are utilized from each workplace such as training schedules, safety concerns, tools, and equipment.

80% OF GRADUATES FIND WORK IN THEIR FIELD OF TRAINING!

Creating a better workforce for Northern California.

Building lives with training and jobs

Who is Eligible?

Anyone Interested in learning New Job skills

Our training is available to anyone seeking new job skills and greater earning ability. Backed in part by government grants, our programs are exceptionally robust and deliver excellent results. In fact, more than 80% of our graduates find and keep work in their field of training!

The ASET Centers are approved by the CA Bureau for Private Post-Secondary Education (currently under “Verification of Exempt” status). All courses are listed in the CA Employment Development Department’s Eligible Training Provider List (ETPL). The ETPL is a list of training providers in California who are eligible to receive Workforce Innovation Opportunity Act (WIOA) funds for training services provided to adults and dislocated workers.
